The English department of Netaji Satabarshiki Mahavidyalaya in collaboration with the IQAC organised a webinar on 'TALES OF OLA BIBI : EPIDEMICS, MIGRANT WORKERS AND NEW MEDIA IN NINETEENTH BENGAL' on 29th June, 2020 at 6.30 p.m. IST. The Resource person was Professor Projit Bihari Mukarji who is the associate professor, History and Sociology of Science of The University of Pennsylvania. The webinar was hosted on Zoom app. The inauguration vis-à-vis welcome address was delivered by Dr. Sudhanath Chattopadhyay, Principal, Netaji Satabarshiki Mahavidyalaya. The webinar was moderated by professor Jayanta Rana, Associate professor and HOD of the English department. E certificates were provided to those who participated in the webinar and submitted their feedback form at the end of it.

Professor Mukharji's speech was pleasantly engaging and it focussed on how Cholera is usually identified as the classic epidemic of globalization. Starting in 1817, repeated pandemics spread rapidly throughout the world and kickstarted the emergence of modern public health systems. Many scholars believe that the disease was endemic to Bengal and spread to the rest of the world through Bengal's incorporation into the British imperial system. One of the grounds on which such endemicity is established is by invoking the presence of a special goddess for the disease in Bengal, that is Ola Bibi. In such invocations, Ola Bibi becomes an ahistorical, unchanging part of Bengali 'folk culture'. In this speech professor Mukherji challenged this view of Ola Bibi as an unchanging 'folk goddess.' Instead, he showed how the cult developed new and innovative forms of media and narratives that were responding to the historical specific phenomenon of rural-urban migration in rapidly urbanizing Calcutta in the nineteenth century. Remembering this history of epidemics, migrancy and media sought to illuminate our present predicament.

The interactive session was extremely lively with the participants being spontaneous and eager. Discussions were done regarding Ola Bibi being a fusion of several cultural constructs and theological beliefs. The colonial and pre colonial ambience were mulled over. There were questions regarding medical history, how constructive imperialism challenge the idea of folk goddess. Was it a medium to propagate Christianity? Questions regarding new societal relations emerging out of lockdown cultures were asked.

Questions regarding the gods and goddesses of the subaltern and whether Ola Bibi is a subaltern goddess challenging the elitist Hindu gods and goddesses were asked. The speaker clarified these questions with eloquence. Questions both in English and Bengali were asked and the speaker greeted both the tongues with enthusiasm. Overall it was a great 2 hour session of exchange of ideas. The valedictory speech was given by professor Milinda Majumdar who is the HOD of the Political Science department and also the convenor of the IQAC of Netaji Satabarshiki Mahavidyalaya.

6. Webinar on “Plague and Shakespeare’s Restless World” : A Report

18th August, 2020

Department of English

The Department of English and IQAC of Netaji Satabarshiki Mahavidyalaya arranged a webinar on the theme “Plague and Shakespeare’s Restless World” on 18th August, 2020. The resource person was Dr. Madhumita Majumdar, department of English, Bhangar Mahavidyalaya. The webinar was well attended by professors and students from other colleges and universities as well as from this college. Around 45 participants participated and interacted through the zoom platform. Prama Bhattacharjee, assistant Professor of English of this college moderated the session. The programme was inaugurated at 6.30 pm with the welcome address by the honourable Principal of the college, Dr. Sudhanath Chattapadhyay. After that the speaker addressed her audience.

The pandemic caused by Coronavirus situation has almost stopped the progress of civilisation. We are quarantined helplessly in our homes with physical and mental threats. People are growing anxious as the bitter events surrounding the COVID-19 are still unfolding themselves. Now it is an urgency to discuss the ways that can provide us with a basic understanding of how we can navigate in today's world. In this webinar we took shelter in the life and works of William Shakespeare. The speaker primarily addressed these questions: What did Shakespeare actually do during the plague and what can Shakespeare's plays of the period teach us about living with the pandemic?

It is fair to say that, like all Elizabethans, Shakespeare's career was influenced by the bubonic plague. Plague laid waste to England and especially to the capital repeatedly during his professional life- in 1582, 1592-93, 1603-1604, 1606 and 1608-1609. With the outbreak of the Black Plague, his Globe theatre and other places of Elizabethan entertainment were forced to close their doors. The speaker especially focused on the plays like Macbeth, Antony and Cleopatra, The Winter's Tale and The Tempest which were written between 1606 and 1610. She analysed how in some of his plays Shakespeare almost never directly represents the pandemic but refers to the plague in the form of everyday exclamations. His works referred to plague not only in dialogue but through mood and atmosphere. Themes of isolation and depressed mental condition found repeated thematic treatment. In brief the webinar made an attempt to establish the relevance of Shakespeare's works in the present troubled scenario. The speaker addressed all the queries of the participants in the interactive session from 7:20 pm. The programme ended with the vote of thanks by Dr. Pradip Kumar Mandal, a member of the college IQAC. E- certificates were later issued to all the participants who submitted the feedback form.
